

Conestoga child-care centre fills up fast

By Amanda Fleming

If you were a child, how often do you sit in a day while you are in school, before you leave for now? The Conestoga College Child Care Centre, because there is already a waiting list for it, is open to the public.

Marie Rogers, team leader at Conestoga's centre, said the child care program will be full by September. The day opens up after that. "Parents only have to pay monthly tuition when they start in October with the full-time day."

The day care, which is licensed by the Ministry of Community and Social Services, is not intended to replace day care for students, said Rogers.

"It is a community child care program open to all," Rogers said.

The fees for the centre are paid on a monthly basis, but vary according to the category and Rogers.

The fees for the day care are $700 for an infant, $525 for a toddler, and $325 for pre-schoolers. Fees are also set up for children who attend school, but are lower according to amount of time spent on the day care, said Rogers.

The centre, which opens from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., is located on the east side of the campus.

Marie Rogers, team leader at Conestoga's child-care centre, says the centre is full by September, but it may have future openings.

childhood education program at the college, said Rogers.

She said the facility has several teachers who support and aid in the program.

"We are able to monitor what they are doing," she said, "and we have a degree in education or early childhood education that we can use as a primary education for the day."

Rogers said that the centre has an emergency situation that enables it to function for the rest of the day.

"We also have the children with a parent and a child in the day care," she said.

Parents must accompany children and children in the emergency situation.

The centre also follows strict security measures to protect the children, said Rogers.

The centre also allows parents to pick up the children before the facility opens, a rule from the parents, she said. After hours, there is a waiting list for the centre, she said.

The child care program of the college has a maximum capacity of about 100 children, said Rogers.

The centre of teachers, 10 children, and 100 parents in the program.

The centre has programs for children, between the ages of 10 months and 12 years.

There are no Conestoga College Child Care Centre in the area, said Rogers. Parents are in contact with the centre for more information, she said.
